Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 11, 12, 18, 21, 22, 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Bowden et al, US Patent Application Publication 2005/0125088. Bowden et al disclose a volume control apparatus for a computer comprising system 100 and volume control routine 130. The computer system 100 stores a maximum volume level setting using a password which reads on storing a threshold for setting a range of an audio output level preliminarily. Paragraph 12 states that if the user wishes to raise the volume level about the maximum volume level, the user is prompted to enter the password that stores that maximum volume level which reads on requesting an acknowledgement that a setting of the audio output level is to be changed if the setting of the audio output level is to be changed to a setting that exceeds the threshold wherein the acknowledgement is the password. Claims 11, 12, 21, and 22 are rejected. Regarding claim 23, figure 2 and paragraph 14 disclose that the volume level is changed if it is under the threshold. Note: The flowchart of figure 2 has a typographical error. The method is described correctly in paragraph 14. Regarding claim 18, there is inherently an upper and lower limit.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 13 and 24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bowden et al. Bowden et al do not disclose that the setting of the audio output level is changed only if an acknowledgement is given that the setting is to be changed within a given time. Examiner takes Official Notice that it was well known to request user acknowledgment of an intended operation and abandon that operation if no response is received. The advantage of this feature was to avoid doing an action when a button is mistakenly pressed. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to change the setting of the audio output level in Bowden only if a response is received within a time period, as well known in the art, for the purpose of eliminating user error.

Allowable Subject Matter

Art Unit: 2615

Claims 16 and 17 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
